EXPLANATORY MEMORANDUM

The World Tourism Organization is an intergovernmental organization of universal character established in 1975 with headquarters in Madrid.

Pursuant to resolution 2529 (XXIV) adopted by the General Assembly in 1969, the United Nations maintains close cooperation with the World Tourism Organization, as reflected in an agreement on cooperation and relations between the United Nations and the World Tourism Organization which came into force on 22 November 1977. Subsequently, the Organization has signed agreements with the main United Nations specialized agencies and, since 1976, has been an executing agency for the United Nations Development Programme.

The World Tourism Organization has a staff of some 90 international officials, the majority of whom are stationed in Madrid. In June 1995, the Organization opened a regional support office in Osaka, Japan.

In December 1986 the World Tourism Organization's Executive Council, by decision 9 (XXIX), expressed its concern that the officials of the Organization should be provided with a retirement scheme that would guarantee pension benefits generally recognized as standard for international civil servants. As a follow-up to that decision, the Secretary-General of the Organization studied the possibility of joining the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund (UNJSPF), as that institution is open to international organizations whether or not they are United Nations specialized agencies. As far as they satisfy the criteria of article 3 of the Fund's regulations.

The principle of joining the Fund was approved by resolution 209 (VII) of the General Assembly of the World Tourism Organization in 1987. In 1988 the Fifth Committee of the United Nations General Assembly considered the membership request favourably, although in the circumstances of that time it took no action on it. Consequently, the Assembly of the World Tourism Organization at its eighth session (1989) decided to suspend the application of the resolution adopted at its previous session providing for membership in UNJSPF.

In 1993 renewed efforts were made to enhance the social protection of World Tourism Organization officials when the tenth session of its General Assembly adopted new staff regulations and rules which, inter alia, provided that "officials whose appointments are for six months or longer shall be entitled to participate in a retirement scheme providing, upon separation from service, benefits equivalent to those generally existing in international organizations". The same rule provided that the Secretary-General of the World Tourism Organization would adopt appropriate measures in this regard for approval by its Executive Council.

To this end, the Secretary-General of the World Tourism Organization recruited experts in 1994 to undertake an exhaustive study on the selection of the most suitable pension scheme. At its fiftieth session, in May 1995, the Organization's Executive Council, following consideration of a comprehensive report submitted by the Secretary-General, "recommended the General Assembly to select membership of the UNJSPF as the best retirement option for World Tourism Organization staff; consequently invited the Secretary-General to resume negotiations with the Secretary of the UNJSPF ... for the organization's admission to the UNJSPF, effective 1 January 1996 or as soon as possible thereafter".

In the light of the Council's decision and an encouraging response from the Secretary of UNJSPF concerning the possible membership of the World Tourism Organization in the Pension Fund, Mr. Antonio Enríquez Savignac, the Secretary-General of the Organization, on 16 June 1995 sent the Secretary of UNJSPF an official membership application for consideration by the Standing Committee of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board at a meeting in New York from 10 to 14 July 1995.

Following this official application and since the Board had recommended the approval of a membership application by the Organization in 1988, the Standing Committee agreed in July 1995 that the Secretary would be justified in consulting the staff pension committees of member organizations in order to ascertain their readiness to approve by correspondence renewal of the Organization's previous application for Fund membership.

During July and August 1995 correspondence was exchanged between the World Tourism Organization and the Fund secretariat so as to ensure that the Organization's staff regulations and staff rules were in accordance with the United Nations common system. The Secretary-General of the World Tourism Organization undertook to submit to its Executive Council some minor changes to the staff rules that were considered necessary.

At its eleventh session, which was held in Cairo from 17 to 22 October 1995, the General Assembly of the World Tourism Organization endorsed the recommendation of its Executive Council concerning the application for membership in UNJSPF.

As is clear from the foregoing, the Organization has expressed its desire to join UNJSPF as soon as possible, in order to remedy the problem of the lack of social protection of its staff, a matter which has been outstanding since the establishment of the organization.

Given that the World Tourism Organization fulfils all the requirements to become a member of UNJSPF, it is proposed that the General Assembly should give the necessary consent.
